A conductor whose international reputation is built on repertoire of unusual stylistic diversity. Frank Strobel has long been recognised as a leading figure in the space where film meet music. In particular, he has played a crucial role in bringing film concerts into leading opera houses and concert halls.

As a guest conductor Frank Strobel conducts both film concerts and symphonic repertoire with orchestras such as the Filarmonica della Scala, HR-Sinfonieorchester Frankfurt, LA Opera Orchestra, London Symphony Orchestra, Orchestre de Paris, Orchestre National de Radio France, Orchestre Philharmonique du Luxembourg, Philharmonia Orchestra, Rundfunk-Sinfonieorchester Berlin, Seattle Symphony, Staatskapelle Berlin and Dresden, Sydney Symphony, ORF Radio-Symphonieorchester Wien and the Tonhalle-Orchester Zürich. Strobel is curating film symphonic concert series at the Alte Oper Frankfurt and the Tonhalle Zürich. Frank Strobel held recently the position as Chief Conductor of the WDR Funkhausorchester.

The 2026/27 season includes the premiere of Jean Cocteau's La belle et la Bête and music by George Auric at the Théâtre du Châtelet in Paris. Frank Strobel will give his debut with the Orchestre symphonique de Montréal presenting Gottfried Huppertz's score for METROPOLIS. A tribute to Ennio Morricone, featuring both symphonic and symphonic film music will be presented with the Orchestre Philharmonique de Radio France and the Choeur de Radio France at the Maison de la Radio in Paris. In addition, Frank Strobel will appear with the HR-Sinfonieorchester Frankfurt, NDR-Radiophilharmonie, Orchestre National de Lyon, Orchestre National Capitole Toulouse, Orchestre Philharmonique de Monte-Carlo, Orchestre Philharmonique Royal de Liège, Rundfunk-Sinfonieorchester Berlin and the Tonhalle-Orchester Zürich.

Frank Strobel has been particularly at home in the French music scene for some time. In June 2026 he conducted Prokofiev's Cantata Alexander Nevsky with the Orchestre Philharmonique de Radio France and the Choeur de Radio France. In 2024, the premiere of Abel Gance's Napoléon epic took place in its entirety at the Seine Musicale in Paris, lasting a total of seven hours in two parts, directed by Strobel. The Orchestre National de France, the Orchestre Philharmonique de Radio France and the Choeur de Radio France performed this exceptional symphonic film concert with a revised compilation by Simon Cloquet-Lafolloye, incorporating a vast collection of classical scores from Mozart to Wagner. In 2023 he premiered also in Paris together with the Orchestre National de France the new score by David Hudry for Berlin. Symphony of a big city. Later on the premiere of the film concert with the feature film Kaamelott: Premier Volet by producer, actor and composer Alexandre Astier took place with the Orchestre National de Lyon. Another premiere was the film music concert Chaplin in Concert. With a smile under his direction at the Philharmonie de Paris with the Orchestre de Paris. Frank Strobel is also a repeated guest at the Festival Lumière. Grand Lyon Film Festival. In 2021, he conducted at the Victoires de la Musique.

Another important French film concert project came to fruition at the Musikfest Berlin and at the Festival Lumière in Lyon in 2019: Abel Gance's seven-hour silent epic La Roue, with a score specially assembled from 117 works written by French composers between 1880 and 1920. Having reconstructed Sergei Prokofiev's music for Eisenstein's films Alexander Nevsky and Ivan the Terrible, Strobel conducted the first performances of his realisations at the Musikfest Berlin. In 2008 an original copy of Metropolis was discovered in Buenos Aires; two years later a fully restored version of the film was premiered at the Berlinale, with Frank Strobel conducting the Rundfunk-Sinfonieorchester Berlin. In 2006 at Dresden's Semperoper he conducted the Staatskapelle Dresden to accompany a reconstruction of the film of Der Rosenkavalier with Richard Strauss's original music.

Beyond the world of film music, Frank Strobel has achieved international recognition for his first performances and revivals of works by Alfred Schnittke, Franz Schreker, Alexander von Zemlinsky and Siegfried Wagner. The great Russian composer Alfred Schnittke (1934-1998) found Frank Strobel congenial, considering him an ideal interpreter of his works. Strobel now retains the adaptation rights for Schnittke's music.

In 2000 Frank Strobel and Beate Warkentien co-founded the Europäische FilmPhilharmonie, an institution dedicated to the artistic development of music and film in the concert hall. Of special significance in this context was Strobel's role as an adviser to the TV station ZDF/ARTE on its' programming of silent films and this has resulted in notable performances of silent films to the accompaniment of legendary musical works.

Within his vast discography the CD series of first recordings with film suites by Alfred Schnittke, arranged by Frank Strobel and realised with the Rundfunk-Sinfonieorchester Berlin were received to great critical acclaim. The fifth release of this series received an Opus Klassik Award in 2022.

In 2026 Frank Strobel was awarded with a Chevalier de l'ordre des Arts et des Lettres in recognition of his contribution to France's cultural heritage.
